2022 Flourish Atlanta

After being part of Atlanta's international community for more than a decade and representing the City of Atlanta's Mayor's Office of International Affairs for seven years and welcoming hundreds of international visitors, and partaking in various trade missions, I can echo what everybody in our city already knows, Atlanta is a global city.

From our legacy as the Cradle of the Civil Rights movement, to our reputation as a tech mecca, a global business hub with the most innovative educational institutions and non-profits, and home to the world's busiest and most efficient airport in the world...Atlanta is influencing the world.

It is now that the world is listening and watching more carefully to understand what makes Atlanta unique. While many may feel this happened overnight, we all know that to achieve this type of success many different actors in our ecosystem came together to launch Atlanta onto the global stage to become the powerhouse that it is today. I often say that to achieve this type of success we must bring the "global" to the "local" and vice versa, to promote a level of cross-cultural and cross-sectoral understanding. A key organization focused on just that is the Georgia Council for International Visitors (GCIV).

I am proud to serve as the Chair of the 39th International Consular Ball this year. What excites me most about this year's gala is the opportunity to bring together and celebrate all the organizations that have contributed to Atlanta's international success.

For the first time in years, the Consular Ball will bring together not only the diplomatic community, but corporations, educational institutions, non-profit organizations, trade offices, chambers of commerce, and government representatives on a local, regional, and state level under one roof and a brand new location, Flourish Atlanta. This event will celebrate the many achievements of these various groups and act as a catalyst for future endeavors.

I am proud to announce this year's theme is "Lights, Camera, Action! Atlanta Showtime", to honor Atlanta's history and our place as the film and entertainment capital, and home of some of the biggest productions in the world. We look forward to welcoming you on September 17, 2022. Come join us and be a global change maker and Ambassador to our City.
